Factory Diagnostic Report

[NOTE: This report is auto-generated by happykitty.io Natural Language Processing (NLP) Artificial Intelligence]

Injuries: 3.7

Shelf Status: 24 days

Piles: 93

Output: 789,114

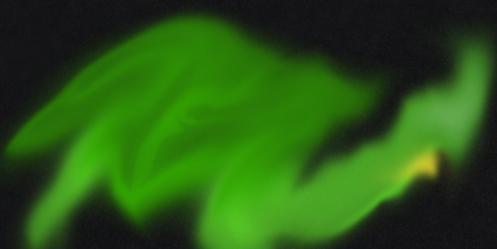

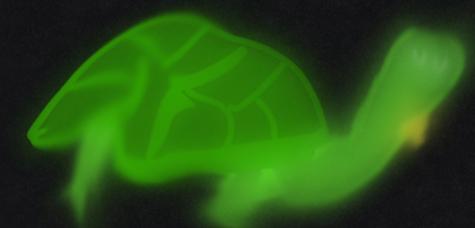

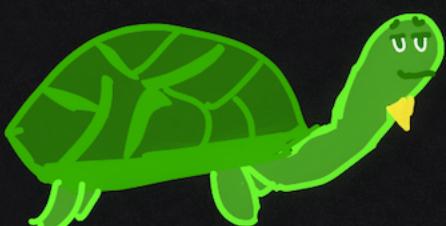

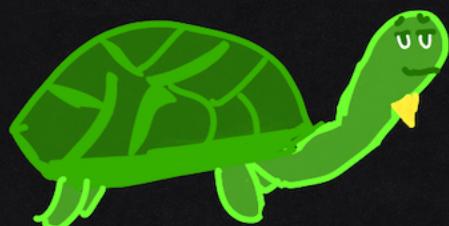

Windows Replaced: 19

Net Output: 93,000

Factory 17-NW's poor performance in Q3 dashed hopes for a profitable year. Issues in the front and the back drove time increases. The corporation's "Grease the Wheels Initiative" led to a 93% increase in output but had no effect on Net Output due to over-greasing. Key areas of weakness include injuries and piles. Key areas of strength include windows replaced.

Highlights: Rebecca earned her certificate award for 13 years of service. Congratulations Rebecca!

It appears a bit peculiar

Where on the page do words usually become magic? When in a thought do ideas often become observed? And how much thinking do you do anyway? Like, really do? Which of the fuzzy ephemeralities that bob and glow in the conjure of your mind are you? Like, really you? If you dwell on this, it goes deeper and deeper and deeper and you gasp for the surface, exhausted by the loop.

And where on the loop does the loop usually become a loop? Sometimes they bend and break and shear and sharp edges that hurt tell you where the loop is. Sometimes they never do, like my hula hoop. Often things aren't a loop at all actually, like my pen or my mouse or a smile or a frown.

It seems a bit strange to make a fuss out of loops. It seems a bit odd to make a show out of words. It seems quite dumb to think them the same, after all, we read left to right or right to left as ingrained. But where on the page do the words become magic? They don't and they do, how can you argue?

Point to where, show me when, the words become meaning as they float around then. They don't, they're a loop; that's it you've been duped.

A photograph of the Seattle skyline at sunset. The Space Needle is prominent on the left, its red and white structure illuminated against the warm orange and yellow hues of the setting sun. Behind it, a dense cluster of skyscrapers of various heights and architectural styles is visible. In the foreground, there are some lower buildings and trees. In the background, a range of mountains is visible under a clear sky.

MEET THE CHEFS

DAG HOLM grew up in the Swedish suburbs. His parents made a name for themselves as the talent management duo who founded the Eurovision Song Contest which introduced groups like ABBA to the masses. Holm moved to Portland in 2021 to start his creative brand “Holmgrown” and spend more time skateboarding.

URBAN EBERT is a 2020 recipient of the Montauket-Dooley Freedom award, which is awarded penta-centennially to academic artists for ecological survey work in the Gran Chaco region of the South American subcontinent. There are few things that Urban admires more than living plants – while his love of competitive springboard lumberjacking may seem on the contrary, he plants two trees for every one he chops down. Urban lives in Seattle with his dogs.
